

August, 18 2008

Kirberg Company Welcomes New Head of Catastrophe Response / Regional Manager

St. Louis, MO – Kirberg Company has hired Chuck McKenna as head of catastrophe response and regional manager at its Jefferson City office. McKenna directs large-scale emergency re-roofing operations for clients across the United States, and he serves as Kirberg's on-site representative at remote roofing projects in Kirberg Company's new regional markets.

McKenna and his team respond to emergency calls in 24 hours or less and can typically arrive at any jobsite within 900 miles by the next day. To expand Kirberg Company's business outside the Midwest, McKenna travels long distances to consult with prospective clients, and he personally oversees many new roofing projects.

McKenna draws upon 37 years of experience in the roofing industry. He was previously employed by the Young Group Ltd., where he served for 12 years as manager of both the Columbia, MO roofing division and the Special Projects division. While at the Young Group, McKenna directed emergency re-roofing projects for industrial, institutional, commercial, governmental and military customers throughout the country.

McKenna, 55, lives near Columbia, MO with his wife, Cathy, and their six children. He enjoys hunting, fishing and practicing martial arts.

Kirberg Company (www.kirberg.com) is a professional roofing and related services contractor established in 1920, with extensive experience in commercial and residential roofing of all types. Kirberg Company is based in St. Louis and has satellite offices throughout Missouri and Kansas. As a founding member of RoofConnect, the premier nationwide professional contractor network, Kirberg Company can serve roofing needs anywhere in the U.S.

McKenna

###